

Abstract of the Disclosure

A conditioning device to change the moisture content of printing stock, in which the stock is brought into contact with at least one endless cloth that absorbs moisture. The endless cloth is heated by heated transport rolls. A 5 reduction of the moisture content contributes to a reduction of distortions of the printing image in two-sided printing, especially in digital printing machines.